

Bleeding in Early Pregnancy

مؤسسة حمد الطبية
Hamad Medical Corporation

HEALTH • EDUCATION • RESEARCH صحة • تعليم • بحوث

Bleeding in Early Pregnancy

Many women have some bleeding from the vagina in pregnancy. Sometimes the pregnancy continues with no ill effects, but bleeding could be an early sign of miscarriage.

- If you are pregnant and have bleeding, record the time and the amount of bleeding. Rest with your feet up until the bleeding slows down.
- If you have to change your pad more often than once an hour, come to the Emergency Department.
- If you pass anything that looks like tissue, come to the Emergency Department. Bring a sample of the tissue with you if possible.
- If you have a temperature of 38.5°C or higher, please call your doctor. You may also need to undergo blood, urine and ultrasound tests.

Women's Emergency Department

 patienteducation@hmc.org.qa

 4439 3295